PAUL ARSENAULT - Head Coach ... Concordia Stingers

Paul began his coaching career in 1963 at Sir George Williams University in Montreal after graduating from the University of New Brunswick earlier that same year. His first team won the league title after dropping its first four games. In fact Sir George went on to win four consecutive league Championships before finally losing to Montreal rival, Loyola College in the 1967-68 season.

During the last three of the four championship years, Paul's "Georgians" were led by present Montreal Canadiens Coach, Bob Berry.

Paul took a leave of absence from coaching in 1968-69 to complete his masters degree in Physical Education at the University of Oregon. Upon his return Sir George missed the playoffs, the only time in Paul's career that his team failed to qualify for post season play. The following year Sir George won the Quebec League Championship once again.

In 1972-73 Paul left Sir George to take over as head coach of arch-rival Loyola College. In three years at Loyola, Paul won two league titles. In 1975-76 Sir George and Loyola merged to form what is now Concordia University. The Stingers, under Paul Arsenault, have won the Quebec Championship every year of their existence
